COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course introduces students to a family systems perspective and its major contemporary approaches. Students will be introduced to the family development framework and common family issues across the family life cycle. This course provides a foundation in systems thinking and a theoretical analysis of the major family therapy approaches that are practiced in the United States today. Implications of systemic thought for ideas about the nature or change will be addressed via in vivo & DVD clinical case examples and class activities. This course also examines systems theory in the context of the relationships among and between community systems, family systems, and school systems, and how they interact to influence students and their families.

2. To introduce student to normative family development and the transitions that are experienced by families as they progress through the family life cycle.
3. To develop student’s systemic interviewing, assessment, and counseling skills, as well as the ability to design intervention strategies utilizing a family counseling approach.
4. To utilize student reflection about their own family-of-origin in order to understand family therapy concepts and system dynamics.
5. To understand the structure, functions, roles and goals of families as influenced by culture, race, ethnicity, gender, age, socioeconomic status, religion, sexual orientation.
6. To understand multi-cultural and pluralistic trends including characteristics and concerns of diverse groups as applicable to family counseling.
7. To apply ethical standards to family counseling situations.

Course Connection to Conceptual Framework

As a result of participating in this course, students will be expected to conduct themselves in accord with the COE conceptual framework of being a reflective decision-maker, exhibiting ethical behavior, and making informed decisions for the well-being of their clients, client families, and the community at-large.

TEACHING METHODOLOGIES AND USE OF TECHNOLOGY

This course utilizes various methods of instruction: lecture, assignments and exercises, and most importantly, student reflection, participation, and discussion. It is critical to your success in this class that you read the material prior to class and be prepared to discuss it. The course is designed to allow you to pursue and understand, via lecture, videotape presentation, debate, and group interaction, your own meanings regarding ideas that are the most prevalent and influential to contemporary family counseling.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

1. Participation: All assigned readings should be done in advance so that you may participate fully in discussions and exercises. Your participation will enhance your learning experience. Active participation in class discussions and activities is an important part of this course.

2. In-class Quizzes: There will be three (3) formal (written) quizzes and ongoing oral questioning to assess basic understanding of essential elements of family therapy, and various theories of family therapy.

3. Family Genogram and Family Patterns Paper: Students are required to write a 5-8 page paper about their own family of origin that reflects an exploration and understanding of the family developmental framework espoused by McGoldrick and other systems theorists. This paper must incorporate an analysis of the system dynamics as it relates to your own family of origin.

4. Family Case “Scenario”: Students will write up a narrative of a family scenario for a family coming to therapy. The scenario will include details about each member of the family, as well as details about the presenting problem. Students may be asked to “direct” classmates in a simulation of the family for a session during the course.

5. Group Presentations: Students are required to join one of six groups that examine the impact of the following dynamics on family systems: Substance abuse/addiction, Grief and Loss, Domestic Violence, Infidelity, Parenting Issues, Sex. Other topics relating to Family Therapy will need instructor approval. These presentations should not exceed 40 min. and should address how each of these areas influences family interactions, function, and adaptation. Presentations must reflect adequate preparation and research. Provide handouts to class and references utilized in the preparation and presentation. In addition, the groups will produce a 15-20 page paper on the topic with at least 10 research articles related to the subject. Although sections of this paper may be written by different students, the whole should reflect a seamless synthesis of material presented. Groups will be finalized by the second class.

6. Final Exam: This final will be some form of take-home exam which may include an in-depth case presentation. It will require the student to be able to synthesize the learning that has taken place over the semester and be able to conceptualize the case from several theoretical and practical points of view. In other words, the student will be expected to practically apply what has been learned to a clinical case study.

Note: All assignments turned in late will be penalized by a letter grade.
Also note: Guidelines for the above assignments can be found on Blackboard.
ATTENDANCE POLICY:

Students are expected to attend all of their scheduled University Classes and to satisfy all academic objectives as outlined by the instructor." Attendance includes meaningful, active involvement in all class sessions, class discussions, and class activities as well as professional, ethical, conduct in class. Reasonable accommodations are made for religious observances.

Since this course provides students with the opportunity to observe actual family counseling sessions that cannot be seen outside of class, class attendance is fundamental to the successful completion of this course. ATTENDANCE AT ALL CLASSES IS MANDATORY. ONLY ONE CLASS ABSENCE IS ALLOWED.

EACH ABSENCE BEYOND THE FIRST WILL RESULT IN A GRADE POINT REDUCTION.

Hello Colleagues;

Current changes for some of the Mental Health courses are necessary to correct the graduate catalog description to a more complete and up-to-date description of the course. These changes do not affect or overlap any other courses in the College of Education. The Revised description is listed first with the current catalog description written below it. Please review and return notification of your support of these changes by the end of semester, 12/9. If you have questions don’t hesitate to contact me.
