Course Description

COM 6296 counts toward the Master of Arts in Communication Studies. It broadly surveys theoretical traditions in film studies, intercultural studies, media studies, and rhetorical studies. Topics discussed over the course of the semester include communication traditions, texts, audiences, practices, and contributions to social change. Prerequisite: none.

Course Objectives

COM 6296 aims to provide students with an introductory engagement with the broad theoretical traditions explored in the MA curriculum. Over the course of the semester, students will engage selected foundational theories across film, intercultural, media, and rhetorical studies. The course is structured into three main units: The first, “Traditions and Innovations,” approaches each of the four areas in terms of the enduring intellectual questions guiding prominent theoretical perspectives. The second, “Audiences, Texts, and Practices,” explores the treatments of communication artifacts and performances in theories of film, intercultural communication, media, and rhetoric. The third, “Communication and Social Change,” interrogates the role communication practices across all four areas play in instigating and carrying out transformative social action. The final discussion-driven seminar meeting puts all four areas into conversation to consider how overlaps between the different orientations offer new avenues for communication studies theory. The course objectives for the semester consist of the following:

- Students will demonstrate knowledge of the core scholarly orientations to communication theory.
- Students will gain expertise in research, writing, and presentation skills developed throughout the course and utilized in the final project.
- Students will master the application of diverse theoretical perspectives to communication texts and practices through in-class discussions and sustained writing assignments throughout the semester.

Course Policies

1. Course Readings: There are 4 required textbooks for COM 6296:

   Copies of these books are available to be purchased at the FAU campus bookstore or online through retailers like Amazon, Half.com, etc.

2. Attendance: While attendance does not count toward the final grade, seminar participants are expected to attend all class meetings unless they have a documented university-excused absence.

3. Assignments: The final course grade in COM 6296 consists of seminar participation, biweekly discussion memos, a final project proposal, a final project presentation, two peer review reports, and a final project. These assignments count toward the final grade as follows:
Seminar Participation (10%): Class participation will be graded according to the level of substantive contributions to the discussion during each week's class meeting.

Discussion Memos (20%): Starting on [date], each student will write a brief memo (250–500 words) every other week in advance of the seminar meeting. The class will be divided into two groups for this assignment, so that the first group writes memos one week, the second group writes memos the next week, and that alternation repeats throughout the semester. These memos should propose a question or issue for discussion and make an argument in response to the assigned readings. Discussion memos are due 24 hours before the class meeting and will be distributed to all seminar participants.

Final Project Proposal (10%): A short proposal (1,000–1,500 words) that identifies a specific topic for the final project, four potential academic books to review, and a preliminary thesis will be due on [date].

Final Project Presentation (10%): Each student will give a short presentation (10–15 minutes) for the final project. These presentations will be followed by a question-and-answer session. The grade for the final project presentation will take both the presentation itself and engagement of other students' presentations during Q&A into account. Presentations will be given on [dates].

Peer Review Reports (10%): Students will be assigned two classmates' final project drafts to read in advance of the final project deadline. After reading these drafts, students will use the assignment sheet and checklist to evaluate them to create a report offering feedback on the draft and suggestions for revision. These reports are due on [date].

Final Project (40%): The final project will be an extended book review essay (5,000–6,250 words) of four recent scholarly books on a topic of the student's choosing. Students should model these essays on the extended book reviews found in our discipline's journals (examples will be posted to Blackboard). The review should combine a critical summary of each of the books with a comparative analysis that works out an original argument about the similarities, differences, and contributions of each of the books selected. Final projects are due on [date].

4. E-mail: Course announcements will be sent out via Blackboard and university e-mail; be sure to monitor your inboxes on a regular basis (at least daily).

5. Late Work: No late work will be accepted, unless a deadline extension is granted due to a documented university-excused absence. Such arrangements must be made with the instructor at the earliest possible opportunity, and certainly before the deadline.

6. Academic Integrity: Students at Florida Atlantic University are expected to maintain the highest ethical standards. Academic dishonesty is considered a serious breach of these ethical standards, because it interferes with the university mission to provide a high quality education in which no student enjoys an unfair advantage over any other. Academic dishonesty is also destructive of the university community, which is grounded in a system of mutual trust and places high value on personal integrity and individual responsibility. Harsh penalties are associated with academic dishonesty. For more information, see the Code of Academic Integrity in the University Regulations at http://www.fau.edu/regulations/chapter4/4.001_Code_of_Academic_Integrity.pdf. In this course, the first academic integrity violation will result in a grade of zero points for the assignment. Any additional violations will result in an automatic F for the semester.
7. Student Disabilities: In compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, students who require special accommodation due to a disability to properly execute course work must register with the Office for Students with Disabilities (OSD)—in Boca Raton, SU 133 (561-297-3880)—and follow all OSD procedures.

8. Classroom Conduct: Disruptive and disrespectful behavior will not be tolerated during class meetings, nor will any activity that potentially puts other students at risk. Students disturbing the class through their misconduct will be asked to leave immediately.

9. Religious Holidays: Students who wish to be excused from coursework, class activities, or examinations must notify the instructor in advance of their intention to participate in religious observation and request an excused absence. The instructor will provide reasonable opportunity to make up such excused absences.

10. Grades of Incomplete: Grades of incomplete ("I") are reserved for students who are passing a course but have not completed all the required work because of exceptional circumstances. Any student wanting to inquire about a grade of incomplete should discuss this with the instructor at the earliest opportunity.
