

Bachelor of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies program

The Bachelor of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies program is for students who wish to concentrate generally in the arts, humanities and social science without a specific departmental major. The knowledge and intellectual training provided is good preparation for graduate study in the fields of the arts and humanities, the study of law, the ministry and careers in public service professions. Three concentrations are available within the Interdisciplinary Studies program: Arts and Humanities; Social Science; and Women, Gender and Sexuality. Students who complete this degree should be able to demonstrate:

- An understanding of interdisciplinary work, both in general and in the context of their specific concentration area.
- Competence in written communication.
- The ability to think critically.
