Faculty FAQ

1) What is Student Opportunity Center (S.O.C.)?
S.O.C. is an online database for undergraduate students to connect with opportunities such as conferences (workshops, seminars, and organization specific events), scholarships, internships, and publications (student and academic journals) at FAU and nationwide.

2) Who has access to S.O.C.?
The service is offered free of cost to FAU undergraduate students and faculty.

3) What are the faculty benefits of using S.O.C.?
Faculty members are able to advertise their specific student opportunities by having them listed on S.O.C. The database is a great recruiting tool because any listed opportunity will be linked to the FAU community page allowing for visibility to FAU undergraduate students.

4) How do I get my opportunity listed on S.O.C.?
E-mailouri@fau.edu with the following information.

- Name and email of faculty mentor
- Name and email of graduate student (if appropriate)
- Project title
- Project description (2-3 line description of what the student will be doing)
- Start date and anticipated end date of project
- Student expectations/qualifications: e.g. course work prerequisites, instrumentation skills, time commitment.
- Deadline for applicants
- Application details: what you want from the student, e.g. CV, research experience, etc.
- web link or flyer with additional information (if available)

Please note: undergraduate students engaged in research projects may require additional research compliance training and certification. For further information please visit the Division of Research website. Additional research compliance information can be found here.
