

ENRICO DALLIO SCHOLARSHIP FOR STUDY IN VENICE

Call for Applications

Enrico Dallio was only 27 years old when cancer defeated him, on Saturday, March 4, 1989. He lived in Mestre-Venice, in the Catholic Parish of San Marco Evangelista. He loved nature, walking, mountain climbing, swimming, karate, cycling, and skiing. He was always ready to laugh and make jokes, but also highly demanding with himself and with others. A Forestry Major at the University of Padua, he was a scout for many years, and his scouting name – so well deserved – was “Puma coraggioso” (brave mountain lion).

Since his diagnosis in 1986 and throughout his treatment, Enrico continued to participate in all scouting activities. His last campout was in Val Da Rin in 1988. He hid his back ache and slept on the ground with the others. In the Fall, he was forced on a wheel chair, but kept welcoming many visits with the usual smile and positive attitude.

The pages of his diary have become an inspiration for his friends. In one of them, he wrote:

“What sense has life if you live it without hope, without values, without goals? . . . In every road there is a crossroad, it is important to know where we are going and to choose the right way.”

His name has been given to the alpine route “Enrico Dallio,” opened in 1989 on the Holzer tower (Dolomiti), and to a playground in Viale San Marco, Mestre-Venezia.

To honor Enrico’s memory and to continue his positive influence on young people, this Scholarship helps Florida Atlantic University students who will conduct the FAU study abroad in Venice, Italy, with a financial contribution of $400.
