Book Project

Hough, Phillip A., Post-Neoliberal Possibilities: Class Formation, Developmental Politics and the Coffee Crisis in Colombia

This project builds upon over a decade of research on agrarian movements in Colombia, demonstrating how the country's coffee producing farmers transformed from being a labor aristocracy that divided the country's agrarian movement during the postwar developmental decades into one that united the country's producers to challenge the imposition of the neoliberal model.

Hough, Phillip A., Trajectories of Hegemony, Domination and Crisis in Colombia: Local Labor Regimes in Global Perspective

This project builds upon my dissertation manuscript and draws upon additional research and conceptual developments as seen in my recent publications. I have already contacted and met with a number of academic publishers who have expressed interest in receiving a book manuscript proposal from me in the near future.
