Meet the Cast....

Ryan Mahannah (Ambrose): FAU's Ryan Mahannah is a cool guy sometimes, but FAU's Ryan Mahannah is short and hairy, sometimes he hides under bridges and scares passing billy goats and children. FAU's Ryan Mahannah is a professional actor, la-dee-fricken-dah.

Daniella Mason (Brigid): Probably the only talented performer in this performance, she is nice but also scary sometimes. Watch out, she'll kill you if you mess with the stuff she cares about. She can be found on weekends trying to find some time to soak up the sun far away from the theatre.

Graham Brown (Gonzoles): The only person in this production with a real major, he plans on making something of himself, he has big hair and can make funny voices. Graham is the tall, handsome, mysterious stranger of the group, he doesn't get to do shows much, but when he does: holy cow.

Lucas Moss (Van De Wimple): Forgets how to spell his name so he has it tattooed into his wrist, Lucas played basketball and now spends his time enjoying long walks on short piers. Lucas is expressly NOT a big dumb doo-doo face, except sometimes when he is. Like now.

Paige Belcher (Helga): A strong woman and proud of it, she makes sandwiches and likes to wear big boots. She also likes the beach, long boarding, and NOT injecting black tar heroin into her eyeballs.

Nicole Pelini (Cynthia): A bodacious blonde from the middle of nowhere, maybe like Idaho or something. She acts and stuff, and doesn't do funny impressions, but she is okay at video games and was once seen creeping around the halls like a deer.

AJ Taylor (Marcel): An actor hailing from the frozen north of Wisconsin, AJ has been acting for twelve years doing shit and I dunno, they just had him write this last minute. He's a juggler, he doesn't write stuff, seriously, what the heck?

Ella Pancaldo (Zha-Zha): No one knows.
