Welcome and Annual Report

Dr. Nicole Morse, Director,
Center for Women, Gender & Sexuality Studies

Congratulations to the Class of 2021!

While the past year has been an extraordinarily difficult time, working with our incredible undergraduate and graduate students has been one of the most wonderful opportunities for myself and WGSS faculty during this period. Times like these make evident the critical contributions that our field makes to a world grappling with profound challenges from the pandemic to climate change to structural racism to gender-based inequality and violence. Student research, scholarship, and activism are at the heart of WGSS, and this year’s celebration honors extraordinary people who have contributed outstandingly to the intellectual life of Florida Atlantic University while also doing the work to make this University more just, more equitable, and more sustainable.

I want to highlight just a few of the incredible students we are celebrating today. Allison Kramer is graduating with a Bachelor of Arts in Criminal Justice with a Minor in Dance and a Certificate in Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. She plans to pursue a career helping victims of sex trafficking and other crimes. Allison has a passion for helping others and strives to make the world a better place. Joi Dean is an Orlando native studying marketing at Florida Atlantic University. Through her work as the President of the FAU chapter of The National Organization for Women, she found a passion for activism and leadership. She has seen the chapter grow exponentially over the last few years and has been lucky enough to serve as the Director of Collegiate NOW for the State of Florida overseeing 6 college chapters.

Dr. Nicole Morse, Director,
Center for Women, Gender & Sexuality Studies

Andre Becantur has become deeply interested and invested in WGSS during his four years of undergraduate study at FAU, where he has spent the past two years working with Owls Care Health Promotion and the Women and Gender Equity Resource Center. He’s been involved in the annual Women’s Leadership Institute, helped create and present a workshop on Masculinity and Relationships at the iLead conference, and has fiercely advocated for Queer Health Equity. As a graduate student with WGSS, he plans to focus on feminist theory, advocacy for queer rights, and more.

This year we are also honoring the leadership of Skeets Friedkin and Lisa Armbrust, who formed the WGSS Advisory Council more than a decade ago with a crucial mission: to preserve the Center and promote the work of the Center in the community. As co-chairs of the Advisory Council, they have led fundraising efforts that have supported so many of our graduate students in pursuing their degrees and have coordinated legendary events that brought feminist leaders together to educate the community about pressing issues facing women and LGBTQ people. It’s impossible to express our gratitude for their devoted leadership, but as they are transitioning to new roles on the Advisory Council, we will do our best to thank them for this extraordinary service. The Advisory Council lost an important member when Penny Ashwanden passed away. Her contributions to the Council’s work and her role in cultivating community engagement remain as a testament to her dedication to the needs of women and LGBTQ people. Our thoughts are with her family and friends, including her partner Kathy, who generously created a scholarship for 2021-2022 in Penny’s name.
Finally, we celebrate the career and the leadership of Dr. Josephine Beoku-Betts, who has steered the Center through numerous challenges and whose work with the fields of WGSS and Sociology is internationally recognized. Dr. Beoku-Betts arrived at Florida Atlantic University in 1997 as one of two faculty members in Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. Prior to coming to FAU, she was on the faculty in the Departments of Women’s Studies and Sociology at the University of Georgia after receiving her PhD from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her primary research is on postcolonial and feminist standpoint discourses on science with emphasis on the educational and career experiences and perspectives of African scientists. Her other research interests include Multiracial Feminisms, Globalization, Postcolonial Studies, Social Studies of Gender and Science, Feminization of Poverty, Women, War, and Peace Building. Locally, she was a co-principal investigator on the NSF Advance IT-Catalyst: Transforming Faculty Gender Diversity at Florida Atlantic University (2016-2020).

Internationally, she just completed a term as President of the Sociologists for Women in Society (2019-2020). Dr. Beoku-Betts' awards include the Florida Atlantic University Presidential Leadership Award (2012) and the Florida Commission on the Status of Women Florida Achievement Award (2012), as well as the Lifetime Achievement Award from the FAU Women’s Leadership Institute (2021). We know that this retirement is not the end of her transformative work in the field and in the world, but rather a new chapter in an extraordinary life.

This year has seen many new opportunities for WGSS, from our first Intellectual Foundations Program course, Gender and Climate Change to the continuing education certificate on gender and equity that we are currently developing with a planned release in the fall. The Lavender Languages Institute will be online this summer, and will be expanding into new in-person formats in future. A new course in Gender and Sport will contribute to an emerging certificate in Sport Studies. As always, this year has demonstrated what we all know to be true: WGSS is integral to Florida Atlantic University. We’re so fortunate to have incredible students from across the university realizing this truth every semester.

Congratulations to the graduating class!
A virtual event for "Feminism and Tech: Julia Dressel in Conversation with Andrea Miller" Nov. 12th.

A virtual book release event celebrating Dr. Jane Caputi’s Call Your "Mutha": A Deliberately Dirty-Minded Manifesto for the Earth Mother in the Anthropocene, published by Oxford University Press on Sept. 2nd.

The Advisory Council's virtual event for "In Dialogue: LGBTQ South Florida," a Film and Panel discussion on Oct. 25th.
A screening event of The Condor & the Eagle (2019, 82 mins) followed by Q&A with filmmaker Casey Camp-Horinek on March 4th.

The Master’s Degree in Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies is the core of the Center for Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies. Within the MA Program students have three degree options: completion of a thesis, internship, or additional classes. These choices allow students to individualize the program. Graduates of the Center have enrolled in PhD programs and many work for community-based or national and international non-profit organizations.

Some students are awarded a Graduate Teaching Assistantship that allows them to apprentice with a professor during their first year of study and to teach a lower division class during their second year. Some students also receive the Annette Van Howe Memorial Scholarship, the Howard Greenfield Foundation Scholarship, or the Walter and Lalita Janke Scholarship. In the late 1990s, following her death, the family of Annette Van Howe established an endowment to provide assistance to graduate students at the Center for Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies. The scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis.

The Undergraduate Certificate

The Center for Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies offers a certificate for undergraduate students. Students must complete 15 credit hours in approved courses to receive the certificate. These courses include “Introduction to Women’s Studies” or “Introduction to Sexuality and Gender Studies,” three core courses and one elective course. The undergraduate certificate is a wonderful addition to any educational track or major, and allows students an in-depth and thorough exploration of gender, sexuality and its intersecting oppressions.

Students who receive a certificate are also eligible to apply for the Laura Sylvia Myers Memorial Award. Laura Sylvia Myers was born in 1962 and died in a car accident in 1984. Each year, the WGSS Center presents an award to an undergraduate student in Laura’s memory. The $1,000 award recognizes a female student who has demonstrated scholarship in the WGSS program, leadership in Women’s Studies and a proven commitment to feminist ideals.

The Graduate Certificate

The Center for Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies offers the option of a graduate certificate. Students must complete 12 credit hours in approved courses to receive the certificate. This opportunity is available for students pursuing the MA or PhD in another area of study at FAU, or who want a graduate certificate independent of other graduate work.
