

ADVOCACY

BE AN EDUCATOR ACTIVIST! Join your Professional Organization to Advocate for Education

Advocacy is an important skill for teachers and educational professionals to understand and utilize. This speaker will discuss ways that educators can advocate on behalf of their students while utilizing an important tool, their professional organizations.

FEATURED SPEAKER: Jacqueline Rodriguez, Ph.D., is the Vice President for Research, Policy, & Advocacy at the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (AACTE) where she leads the strategy and content development for the association's scholarship, programs and professional learning, state and federal policy, and advocacy initiatives. Jackie is an experienced teacher, teacher leader, and professor. Prior to her appointment with AACTE, Jackie served William & Mary as a special education faculty member in the School of Education. Her book, "Special Education Law and Policy: From Foundation to Application", focuses ensuring educators and advocates are prepared to support students with disabilities in our nation's schools.
