OPEN TO COLLEGE OF EDUCATION DOCTORAL STUDENTS AND FACULTY

Prior to her position at FSU, Hardin worked at Illinois State University as a tenure track Assistant Professor. She has also provided special education services to students in K-12 inclusive, resource, and separate setting classrooms. Hardin currently teaches multiple higher education courses around an array of special education areas. Within each course, she infuses culturally responsive strategies and discussion to prepare candidates to work with diverse populations. Hardin's research interests include females with emotional and behavioral disabilities (EBD), culturally responsive teaching, anti-racist education, and STEM education for minorities and students with disabilities.

In this series, invited scholars will engage in a facilitated discussion with doctoral students about varied aspects of academia. The format is informal, allowing for questions and answers about working and thriving in academia.

This event will feature Stacey E. Hardin, Ph.D., (she/her/hers), program leader and faculty in the of the special education teaching program at Florida State University. Hardin will discuss her experiences working at R1 ("high research activity") universities and preparing candidates to work with diverse populations.
