Conference Courses Statement
(Disclosure about Costs of Attendance)

Conference-focused courses (EDH 7931 Research Conference & EDH 6931 Student Affairs Conference) are experiential electives that require students to travel and pay additional costs beyond tuition and distance fees (e.g., registration, lodging, transportation, meals). These conferences generally last for several days/nights and are held in different locations each year. Students may apply for scholarships and other funds to offset the costs.

Conference registration and travel costs can be included in the Cost of Attendance (COA) if the conference course is part of the student's course curriculum/program of study and occurs during the period of enrollment. However, the student would need to request this adjustment from their financial aid advisor. The "Special Circumstances: Cost of Attendance Request for Professional Judgment" form is used to request an adjustment to your cost of attendance for expenses such as childcare, disability related costs, or other allowable categories. The form is available through the student's financial aid advisor.
