Selection Process

The department's doctoral admissions committee will review all evidence of high promise found in the applicant's admissions documents, including but not limited to: grade trends, work experience, accomplishments and promotions, letters of reference and attainment in rigorous courses. Following the document review, selected applicants will be interviewed by the doctoral admissions committee and provide a writing sample. The committee will then recommend candidates for acceptance and notify them of the decisions.

All required admissions documents must be submitted by February 15 for fall admittance. The applicant pool will be reviewed in May of each year. Depending on enrollment, the department may open the doctoral program for admittance at other times during the year. Students should consult the department for additional admission dates.

Hi Cheryl,

Attached is a Program Change Form for changing ELRM's Fall doctoral admissions to March 1. This is for the next GPC Meeting and I copied our Department's GPC reps.

If you need anything else, please let us know.

Thank you very much,
