IDS 3932 – Honors Wicked Problems

Drs. Tim Steigenga and Christopher Strain

T/R 3:30-4:50pm

Course note:

This course addresses issues like gun violence, immigration, and other policy problems that are hard to solve (or develop good policy for) due to contradictory factors that are interdependent and change along with the dimensions of the problem. There are not really “solutions” to such problems, just better and worse ways to address them. The first part of the class will address what wicked problems are and use the examples of immigration and gun violence to illustrate the approach. In the second part of the class students will be analyze additional issues through the lens of wicked problems and present them to the class.
