2026 DISTINGUISHED TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Dr. Parvathi Perumareddi
Associate Professor
Charles E. Schmidt College of Medicine

Parvathi Perumareddi, DO, is a board-certified Family Medicine physician and Associate Professor at the Schmidt College of Medicine. She joined the faculty in 2015 after a brief stint post-residency practicing Emergency Medicine in Jackson, MS, and then nearly 14 years in Memphis, where she practiced Family Medicine at a county clinic and later Internal Medicine at the VA. Returning to her hometown of Boca Raton, she embraced a long-held dream of entering academic medicine.

Dr. Perumareddi teaches and mentors medical students across all four years of the curriculum, with a primary focus on first- and second-year learners. She serves as course director for the foundational Pathophysiology and Therapeutics course, encompassing the renal, reproductive, and endocrine systems and also teaches across a spectrum of small-group sessions ranging from cardiology to clinical documentation to diabetes. Nationally, she has contributed to the medical licensing exams taken by all U.S. medical students and interns by authoring exam items. She also enjoys presenting community lectures on health, wellbeing, and lifestyle medicine.

Some of her favorite things include spending time with family, entertaining friends in her home, music, dancing, walking, lifting weights, volunteering and hanging out with her German Shepherd, Kashi. One of her greatest blessings is once again living in the neighborhood where she grew up, just blocks from her parents' home.

Inspired by a childhood watching her father's example of kindness, patience, and altruistic service as an educator to his own students as well as to her brother and her, Dr. Perumareddi is passionate about creating an engaging learning environment, building confidence in her students, and modeling compassion for future patient care. She is known for her deep commitment to teaching and her thoughtful investment in each student's growth, a privilege she embraces humbly. Dr. Perumareddi feels profound gratitude for the opportunity to be back in her hometown close to family, doing what she loves alongside talented colleagues, and considers it a gift to spend her post-practice career encouraging medical students to reach their potential and grow into insightful, conscientious, and skilled physicians.
