London, England

Modern Urban Design & Transportation in a Historic City
FAU Faculty-led Program
Spring Break: March 2 - 8, 2018

Study the juxtaposition of modern London as a global financial center against its historic background which is still very much alive today as a major tourist destination. On this program students will study urban design and transportation and analyze how London is addressing the same urban planning concerns as Florida.

Eligibility and Requirements:
- Overall GPA of 2.5 or higher for undergraduate and 3.0 or higher for graduate.
- Must be enrolled in course URP 4955 or URP 5958 during the spring 2018 semester at FAU. Class meets only 2 Friday evenings before the trip to London & only 1 Friday evening after London. The London program is a fundamental requirement of the spring course.

Course Offerings:
- URP 4955: Planning Abroad (3 credits - undergraduate)
- URP 5958: Planning Abroad (3 credits - graduate)

Program Highlights:
- Urban design field work in London to evaluate public transportation first hand.
- Work with the local community (AS-L Project).
- Walking lectures discussing London urban design and transportation.
