The Sociology Department would like to change the prerequisites for its 4000-level course offerings. Those courses include:

- SYA 4310 Qualitative Research Methods
- SYA 4400 Sociological Analysis: Quantitative Research Methods
- SYA 4930 Special Topics
- SYP 4063 Social Construction of Sexuality
- SYP 4453 Global Social Change
- SYP 4464 Sociology of Climate and Disaster
- SYP 4610 Cultural Sociology

The new prerequisites will be:

- SYA 3010 (Sociological Theory)
- SYA 3300 (Sociological Analysis: Survey of Research Methods)

This request corresponds to the Sociology's Department's program change proposal, which is included in this dossier. Beginning in Spring 2021, faculty in the Sociology Department will begin instructing 4000-level classes as capstone courses that require students to conduct full-scale research projects. The purpose is to help students achieve proficiency in the learning goals that the department codified through its Writing Enhanced Curriculum initiative.

SYA 3010 and 3300 will equip students with the background knowledge and skills they need to successfully complete research projects in 4000-level classes. Please see our program change memo for further information.

Additionally, please note that SYA 4930 is a special topics course with rotating content. As such, we have not included a syllabus for it in this file.
