CONCENTRATION IN WOMEN'S STUDIES

Advisory Board:

Dr. Wairimu Njambi

Dr. William O'Brien

Women's Studies is an interdisciplinary field designed to provide an understanding of the complex ways in which gender and sexuality are defined in relation to society, culture, science and technology. Its critical perspectives are both analytical (synchronic) and historical (diachronic). The field of Women's Studies challenges and transforms traditional disciplines through new methods and theories generated by feminist scholarship. It offers students critical ways of thinking about how prevailing issues of gender and sexuality shape social, political, economic, and institutional structures as well as personal experiences and perceptions. At the same time, it offers diverse perspectives on women's issues, within local, regional, and global contexts, self-critically presenting continuous challenges to Women's Studies itself. In this sense, Women's Studies promotes awareness of diversity among women through the integration of content and theory to reflect the racial, social, ethnic, sexual and other forms of diversity of women's experiences and practices. Hence Women's Studies is, by design, an interdisciplinary, multicultural, and critical project with both theoretical and practical goals.

Women's Studies promotes and encourages practices of empowerment including campus activism, as well as political involvement in the community. Areas of emphasis within Women's Studies are the study of gender and sexuality, including gay and lesbian studies; race, ethnicity, and class; science, technology, and medicine; feminist theories and feminist activism.

The Honors College concentration in Women's Studies provides the necessary background for students wishing to do graduate work in Women's Studies; cultural studies; sociology; social studies of science, technology and medicine; feminist philosophy; law; international studies and other related studies in humanities and social sciences.

Available Options: Concentration in Women's Studies; Minor Concentration in Women's Studies.

Important Notes

Students are highly recommended to do their internship or study abroad in an area related to Women's Studies.

Also, students are reminded they need 45 upper-level (3000 or 4000-level) credits to graduate.

A Woman's Studies concentrator will have acquired the following specific skills upon completion of the concentration: critical thinking and writing skills; an historical and critical comprehension of the interdisciplinary contributions of philosophy, anthropology, sociology, linguistics, psychology, biology, and economics to the understanding of gender and the situation of women; appreciation of international and multicultural perspectives on the lives and contributions of women to civilization; a critical understanding of the ways in which systems of knowledge and power operate in the making of the interlocking structures of sexism, racism, heterosexism and classism, as well as an understanding of how one's own identity is informed by those systems; an ability to establish connections between feminist theories and other academic areas of study, as well as between feminist scholarship and feminist activism; an ability to comprehend the challenge of living in the multicultural, globally interdependent world of the twenty-first century.
