Program Name Biological Anthropology Concentration	<input type="checkbox"/> New Program* <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Change Program*	Effective Date (TERM & YEAR) Fall 2026
Please explain the requested change(s) and offer rationale below or on an attachment. 1) Change: Remove ANT 3212 H Peoples Around the World from required courses Rationale: ANT 3212 is no longer in the general education requirements, and therefore cannot be taught as frequently as necessary to require for concentration. In the future will be taught approx. every 4 years, so that it can be an elective/areas studies for Biological Anthropology and other related concentrations (see below). 2) Change: Add an additional required elective, total required elective Anthropology courses changes from two to three. Rationale: This is to accommodate the change in required credits when removing ANT 3212. The number of Anthropology courses in the Biological Anthropology concentration remains the same as ANT 3212 is no longer required. 4) Change: Add electives missing from current list— ANT 2100C and ANT 3212. Rationale: Make sure that all current anthropology classes are included in the list of electives so that the concentration options are up to date 5) Change: Change ANT 2410 course name to "Honors Introduction to Cultural Anthropology". Rationale: This will correct the outdated name and reflect current state approved course name.

Biological Anthropology

Students must earn a "C" or better in each course taken to fulfill a concentration requirement.

Description:

Biological anthropology is the study of the physical aspects of humans, primates, and their ancestors. The field of biological anthropology encompasses several areas of study including primatology, paleoanthropology, human evolution and adaptation, genetic variation, forensic and medical anthropology. The Honors College concentration in biological anthropology is designed for students who are interested in pursuing a career in medicine or who want to combine their interests in biology and anthropology. Students are encouraged to undertake an internship or study abroad program related to their specific areas of interest, such as primatology, forensics, or cross-cultural health care. Examples of internships that Honors College students have done include the Primate Enrichment Program at the Palm Beach Zoo, and the Himalayan Health Exchange study abroad program.

Students with a concentration in Biological Anthropology may pursue careers in fields such as medicine, holistic health, forensics, nutrition, biostatistics, kinesiology, biomechanics, genetic counseling and public education. Biological Anthropology concentrators who plan to attend medical school are strongly encouraged to familiarize themselves with our pre-med guidelines and take the courses required for medical school and recommended for MCAT preparation, in addition to the requirements for the biological anthropology concentration.
