Colleagues:

I am submitting a course in Environmental Education in Early Childhood Education for statements of no conflict.

Dr. Bhagwanji has also provided an extended rationale for the course presented below.

Thanks,
Dilys

I don't see any conflict or overlap with courses or curriculum in ESE. Good luck!

Dear Dr. Schoorman,

I would appreciate your approval and no conflict statements from department chairs for the attached syllabus. The new course proposal form is attached as well. The following narrative provides a rationale that may be shared with department chairs:

"In line with the University's commitment "to becoming a force for positive change in its various communities through its leadership and by leveraging its knowledge, expertise, and resources along with those of the community in authentic engagement for mutual benefit," this practicum course proposes to engage students "in learning experiences and make contributions in enhancing the community partner's efforts to further the aims of early childhood environmental education." The practicum focuses on disseminating cutting edge knowledge and experiences related to Early Childhood Education for Sustainability (ECEfS) that will benefit both students and community organizations. The course will be open to students from all disciplines and can meet open elective requirements for many programs from multiple colleges. The course is also a grant-funded initiative and will provide students with tuition fee reimbursements in its inaugural offering."

Thank you,
Yash
